Welcome to Strange Tales 2: More Mysterious Place and Odd People. It gives me great pleasure to bring you more of my favourite cases from my StrangeBlog, extensively revised and with added illustrations for book form. In this volume you can read about: • William Terriss, the Victorian actor who was tragically cut down in his prime, and is now one of London theatre land's most famous ghosts • The fascinating zombie legends of Haiti • Darya Saltykova, the monstrous sadist of Tsarist Russia • Avebury, the small Wiltshire village which is steeped in mysterious phenomena • The English countess who ruthly conspired to bump off an inconvenient husband • The Scottish castle which has more gruesome legends than you can shake a stick at Plus - did Marilyn Monroe keep a secret diary containing dangerous secrets? Is it possible for people to innocently stumble into parallel universes? Did a German peasant girl really manage to live for several decades without eating or drinking? These and several more ... I hope you enjoy Strange Tales 2. The world continues to be a perennially fascinating place.
