What is at the heart of a vast conspiracy that involves very round hedges, something that gobbles, a strange macaroon-headed man, a mysterious parchment and men in horribly striped ties? It's up to Doc Armstrong, the world's most renowned meteorographer, the man who took down The Lost Skeleton of Cadavra, to get to the bottom of it, along with his loyal 1950s housewife wife Betty, alien friends Kro-Bar and Lattis, and Ranger Brad's town brother City Brad, formerly Jungle Brad but he's in the city now. Together they face overwhelming odds as powerful forces seek to change the world we know into the world we don't know, in this absurdist mash-up of pulp adventure, B-movies and surrealism. Presenting the first of the further adventures of the beloved characters of the cult classic films, The Lost Skeleton of Cadavra and The Lost Skeleton Returns Again, written by their creator, writer-director Larry Blamire, who also played Dr. Paul Armstrong in the movies, but for the book will leave it to just words.
