Quantum physics states that substance comes into existence through actual observation, meaning that when a mind thinks something into existence, it becomes real. Thus, energy is both conscious (fully aware, deliberate and intentional) and infinite (bound and end). It is the cyclic universe theory that postulates that the universe has no beginning and no end (in a traditional sense), given that the universe has been exploding into existence, repeatedly over time, extending far into the past as well as into the future; hence, it is quite conceivable, in fact, that the universe has existed forever. In addition, this theory also states that matter and energy, albeit finite, are infinitely recycled. Knowing that energy is incarnate, that energy is constant, that energy is cyclical, that everything emanates from the same source, I am everything and everything is me. Likewise, you are everything and everything is you. Having identified the Maharishi Effect, learning to activate the unified field, courtesy of Transcendental Consciousness, shows us that world peace is very much achievable. Clearly, science and mysticism are more deeply entwined than has been previously thought.
