If you call it a mechayeh when you take off your Spanx, Say, “Darn, I’ve got bubkes” when your checking account is empty, And stock the refrigerator with all their favorites when the kids come home ... ..

then you’ll recognize yourself, your bubbe, and the entire mishpuchah in "The Whole Spiel," a collection of 34 humorous essays that takes a heartfelt look at modern life as a member of the tribe. Read about the great shnecken vs. rugelach battle, the newly discovered Jewish summer holiday of Simchat Squash, and why yesterday’s nebbish is today’s millionaire tech nerd. Joyce Eisenberg and Ellen Scolnic are The Word Mavens. They are the authors of the "Dictionary of Jewish Words" (JPS 2006). They write about Jewish holidays, family life, food and more for The Forward, InterfaithFamily.com and Jewish newspapers across the country; their essays on current events are frequently seen on The Philadelphia Inquirer Commentary Page. They blog, tweet, and interact with their fans at TheWordMavens.com.
