Connor MacLeod, ex-Major in the British army who transported himself to a different dimension, and who, after 20 years using his abilities to carve out an empire, is given the option to leave that dimension by the Gyden because it is determined that he has inadvertently turned out to have an immortal body! The alternative to leaving is to become one of them - a Gyden - which stands in total opposition to everything Conn has fought for. With only the one real choice on offer and only a moment to choose, Conn decides to return. He also takes Halla with him because her life is irrevocably bound to his. They soon discover that what was an impossible decision quickly becomes really complicated when Asherah suddenly appears on earth and discloses that his presence there could fundamentally damage the delicate balance of that dimension, and now wants him to leave, again. Assuring him that his immortality is no longer an issue, she offers to send them "home". They agree, but soon find that "home" is not where Asherah, mother and most powerful of all the Gyden, actually sends them, and the purpose of her actions, if there are any, are not easy to uncover. She is also, surprisingly, not around to ask.
