Soliciting from Home is a tongue-in-cheek title to reflect this light hearted look at the vagaries of setting up a legal practice in 1970s England.

Packed with authentic and endearing characters, unexpected romance and good old-fashioned country town drama, Soliciting from Home is an amusing, occasionally sad, but always warmhearted account. 'A gentle amble through the English way of life in the style of James Herriot and Gervase Phinn. This book will remind you of leisurely times-gone-by as you wander through the vagaries of the law with a young lady solicitor by your side! I smiled all the way through.' Reader's Review.
