In general, turning to ancient remedies has been treated with apprehension in the medical industry. These natural cures don't make them money, and they haven't been tested in labs for huge periods of time before being announced effective. This seems silly when for centuries these herbal methods have been working well enough to be passed down throughout the ages because of their healing benefits. Even if the placebo effect was to blame for all the apparent health benefits, why denounce it when obviously something about them has worked for millions of people over time? That said, the medical industry has a lot of dangerous drugs too – they're the kinds of things people shouldn't put into their bodies unless they are prepared to wreak genocide on their good and bad bacteria and make themselves vulnerable to numerous other diseases. That's not even considering the huge list of side effects of medications that we are often the guinea pigs of. Thankfully, prevention is better than cure and a healthy diet and exercise can prevent a lot of problems. And, if you do happen to suffer from a health imbalance, there are herbs you can find right in your own backyard that will help you to get better quickly and get back on track with your health!
