Book Four in the Ivory Towers series. Moving towards graduation, Angel struggles with leaving behind aspects of his past.

But will Shane convince him that together they can build a future? It's Angel's senior year and time for some tough decisions. Coming out to his grandmother...meeting Shane's family...Every step Angel takes forward feels like two steps back until he wonders how he's turned into a guy totally different from who he was when he started school. Shane feels Angel slipping away but can't figure out how to drag him back. Things are finally shaping up for Shane—with a new job in the works and a second movie optioned—but he wonders why Angel isn't ready to move on to a more grown up life.

When a friend from Angel's past arrives at Pacific Rim University, Angel slips into doubt and confusion over his life and starts to take dangerous risks. When Shane steps in to make things right, he ends up pushing his lover even farther away. If Shane's going to keep Angel by his side, it'll take more than sweet words and great sex. Shane will have to be the family Angel's lost and replace the life Angel's leaving behind. And he'll need to convince Angel to accept all the love and commitment Shane has to offer. Reader Advisory: This book contains references to drug use.
