Desperate for a change, Sarah Hunter persuades her two best friends, Pam and Ali, to leave Mississippi and buy a decrepit hotel on 160 acres in New Mexico, where they can each escape their problems and reinvent themselves. However, she hasn't counted on the greed and power of the local patron who controls the town and is determined to own their hacienda--at any cost. Challenged by lack of funds, lack of utilities, surly locals, ghosts, and guns, the three women struggle to keep their new home, their friendships, and their lives.
