Instantly Ben drew his favorite sword into his right hand. It was unique for a sword because the blade was thin, and made from a dark red stone yet stronger than any metal. In his left hand he drew a four shot Airon pistol made of silver that had a carving of a dragon on the barrel. After his next breath he headed off back around to where the gate was. He was shocked to see that it was snapped in half as if a giant had tore it and after a closer inspection he noticed the wood was burnt and smoke was working its way up from the edges. Ben waited then not hearing anything else, he quietly walked into the village weapons at the ready. -This story will grasp you from the start and won't let up!
