Staff Sergeant Belinda Watt starts out as an infantry cook in the Earth-based Galactic Federation. She resents getting hit on by all the guys because of her spectacular figure. But when her phenomenal sharpshooting skills are discovered, she is quickly shifted to sniper and begins to rack up major competitions. Pretending to present her with a special medal in his hotel room, General Bloodworthy assaults her. In the struggle, Belinda kills the General. She is exonerated in a court martial but the Guardian Council—a fraternal organization of combat field officers—swears revenge. To escape their clutches, Belinda is smuggled off Earth by an intelligence agent--Lt-Col Andrew Jackson Jones--who is being sent to Magnus—a very strange planet on the outskirts of the known Universe. His mission is to discover why it's prodigious output of the precious metal Lithium Oxycarbide has fallen so precipitously. Was it a dry hole, or is something more sinister going on? The two land secretly on Magnus and begin a reluctant partnership. They form a bar & trading company hoping to learn what is going on from hunters and travelers. They discover that the Magnus GalFed is pocketing a majority of the precious metal. Their next scheme—to take over the planet for the Magnus-based Galactic Federation—and then the entire GalFed organization!! Then, the Magnus Guardian Council discovers she is there....
