Caedmon brings together some of the most unforgettable stories in literature, vividly realized both by the authors themselves and by a cast of superb actors. Continuing and enhancing the Caedmon tradition of bringing the greatest literature to vibrant audio life, here are stories that have echoed through the years, brilliantly performed by an array of renowned actors, as well as the authors themselves. These fourteen unforgettable recordings feature Eudora Welty's earthy wit in Why I Live at the P.O., Ossie Davis's electrifying incarnation of Langston Hughes's eloquent A Toast to Harlem, and John Updike's delightfully droll reading of his own Persistence of Desire. The Caedmon Short Story Collection offers such a rich and varied spectrum of listening experiences—whether shattering, darkly hilarious, or cuttily incisive—it will make for count hours of enjoyment that only increase with each return to it.
