The author, STAN SCHERR, takes us on a journey in the life of a farmer and rancher in Eastern Colorado. He outlines the history of his parents settling on their farm in Seibert, Colorado during some of the most difficult times in American history-the "GREAT DEPRESSION" and the notorious "DUST BOWL" of the 1930's. They not only survived these hardships; they worked hard and flourished. STAN describes the various operations of his wheat farm and cattle ranch with beautiful full-color photos and detailed captions. This is a wonderful presentation of rural life in America.
